Art Museum Trustees Jog the Comptroller's Memory.

They Will Not Again Ask the Board of Estimate for Money,

On the Contrary, They Will Remove the Collections from the Park.

The controversy in regard to the appropristion by the city for the support of the Metropolitan Museum of Art for the ensuing year appears to be assuming a rather serious ect, judging from the statement made this morning by one of the trustees of the Museum to an Evening World reporter. This member of the Board, who declined to allow the use of his name, but said that be spoke for all his colleagues, said: "If Comptroller Myers has been reported correctly in the papers he must be endowed with a very poor memory indeed, for he has officially requested by letter to appear before the Board of Estimate on the 20th of October last, and they old appear before that Board at 11 o'clock A. M. on that day.

"Mr. Myers—who is said to be the only member of the Board who opposes giving the amount the trustees need—has conveniently forgotten also that John Bigelow, on behalf of the trustees, appeared on that day, accompanied by Salem H. Wales and Gen. di Cennola—two other trustees of the Art Museum—and explained at length to the Board of Estimate that the Museum needed $0.5,000 for the running expenses of 1803, including the new wing, and needed every cent of it.

"M. Myers has also conveniently forgotten that Mr. Dana, the President of the Departpartment of Public Parks, on the 20th of october aforesaid recommended to the Board in presence of Mr. Bigelow, to grant the Museum of Art $85,000 and the Muse
